

The Shareholder Right to Act by Written Consent Proposal 4 Deserves Cboe Global Markets (CBOE) Shareholder Support

According to state law Cboe Global Markets (CBOE) shareholders can have the right to act by written consent and the right to call for special shareholder meeting. Both rights allow shareholders to take action between annual meetings.

Shame on CBOE for suggesting that its shareholders limit themselves to one shareholder right when CBOE shareholders are entitled to 2 shareholder rights under state law.

It especially important for CBOE shareholders to have a right to act by written consent because CBOE shareholders have only an unattainable right to call for a special shareholder meeting. CBOE requires the backing of 25% of all shares outstanding to call for a special shareholder meeting.

The reason that the 25% figure is a too high is that more than 100 companies have had an opportunity to give one example of a special shareholder meeting ever taking place at a any company whatsoever that required 25% of shares to call for a special shareholder meeting.

Not one of these 100+ companies have ever cited even one example of a special shareholder meeting ever actually taking place where the requirement was 25% of shares. Management likes the 25% figure because it knows the 25% figure is a safe figure for management entrenchment and a special shareholder meeting will never take place.

It is important to adopt a shareholder right to act by written consent because the current CBOE right to call for a special shareholder meeting is unattainable.
